

Building Effective Teams

Program Description:

We've all had to work with people who were quite different from us. It can be frustrating. But have you ever worked on a team where people have learned to deal with their differences, where conflict and miscommunication are reduced, meetings have a purpose, and time is managed efficiently? The goal of this workshop is to reconcile the differences of team members to help you create an engaged, collaborative team.

Results: Participants will:

- Learn about different team roles as well as their preferred role.
- Understand the challenges and communication breakdowns they may face when working with others who have different priorities, roles, and talents.
- Learn how to maximize productivity of team meetings by identifying clear expectations and understanding how to manage their own priorities and tendencies.
- Understand the process through which a team or organization creates, develops, and realized a project.
- Create personal action plans for strategies to consider when working and communicating with the various team roles.

Suggested Audience:

Individuals who want to improve the efficiency of their workgroup and tap into each team member's strengths.

Program Length:

4 – 8 hours
